Astarti's master controls her through a Leash, a bond of energy anchored deep within her. Despite being one of the few remaining Drifters, able to manipulate the energy world, she cannot break free. She knows her fate: she will serve until she dies, at which point her master will harvest her energy to augment his own.

Oh, yes, she's done some bad things in her master's name. She's not asking for forgiveness. She expects you to hate her.

What she doesn't expect is Logan, a man meant to be her sworn enemy. A man with secrets as dark as her own.

Editorial Review

Review

"I LOVED this book! I seriously think it could (should) be the next hugely popular young adult fantasy!"--
Molly, Woven Magic Books Blog

"This story is exactly why I love reading so much."--Anke, Goodreads Reviewer

From the Inside Flap

"Drifter." His voice is deep and rich beneath the scorn. "I should have known."

I won't rise to that bait. Everyone knows Earthmakers hate my kind. I demand, "What are you doing here?"

He stares his refusal at me.

Now that I'm so close, I notice that his eyes are the strangest I've ever seen. Their color shifts: blue to green, then streaked with brown, then edged with gold. They shift to green again. I frown. "What's wrong with your eyes?"

His jaw clenches, and his eyes turn blue, as an Earthmaker's should be. He stills as though he's under control now, but the pulse beating hard under my knife and the tension of his lean, muscled body tells me his control is thin.

He says steadily, "What do you want with Martel?"

I press the blade harder and feel a wash of satisfaction when he winces. "I'm asking the questions."
