Teaching Children's Literature in an Era of Standards By Amy A. McClure, Abigail V. Garthwait, Janice V. Kristo

Teaching Children's Literature in an Era of Standards presents a realistic, positive, and proactive approach to using the Common Core State Standards (CCSS) and 21st Century Learning Standards as the basis for teaching children's literature in kindergarten through eighth grade, addressing the caveats and issues involved in implementing the standards. This new text encourages teachers to value children's books for both enjoyment and learning, suggests teaching strategies matched to the specific grade levels and skills defined by the CCSS, and provides examples of excellent children's books as resources. Suggestions and advice for integrating new technologies into children's literature instruction are emphasized in conjunction with traditional teaching methods. Topics include responses to literature, teaching strategies for the focused use of children's books, supporting literacy development, fostering a love of reading, and chapters devoted to the major forms and genres of children's literature: picture books, poetry, traditional literature, fantasy and science fiction, contemporary realistic fiction, historical fiction, and nonfiction.

Editorial Review

Review

Teaching Children's Literature in an Era of Standards is full of needed content, yet conveys it in a welcoming, conversational manner that helps students engage with the material and learn how to balance policy, standards, and true reading.

It is readable, with many opportunities to learn about new titles. The tech clicks and CCSS references are what sets this book apart. -- Dr. Stephanie Affinito, SUNY Albany

The organization and logic of this text are major strengths. The text hits on current trends and real issues in teaching children's literature in today's school climate. -- Lindsay Persohn, University of South Florida

This text is written by someone passionate about children's literature and about the impact good teaching can have on a child's love of reading. The author(s) understand teachers and have found ways to make CCSS manageable and practical. -- Patricia L. Rieman, Carthage College

From the Back Cover

In Teaching Children's Literature in an Era of Standards, new, experienced, and pre-service teachers of children's literature will discover how to use the Common Core State Standards as a framework for prioritizing children's literature instruction, while also meeting the standards' English Language Arts mandates. It presents a realistic, positive, and proactive approach to using the CCSS and 21st Century Learning Standards as the basis for teaching children's literature in kindergarten through eighth grade, addressing the caveats and issues involved in implementing the standards. Included are:

- A look at the importance of valuing children's books for both enjoyment and learning.
- Teaching strategies matched to the specific grade levels and skills defined by the CCSS.
- Examples of excellent children's books of many genres.
- Ideas for integrating new technologies into children's literature instruction.
- A full chapter on response to literature.
- A chapter on teaching strategies for the focused use of children's books to support literacy development and foster a love of reading.
- Chapters devoted to the major forms and genres of literature: picture books, poetry, traditional literature, fantasy and science fiction, contemporary realistic fiction, historical fiction, and nonfiction.
